No one can answer that question with certainty. That would just be subjective. NFL football is a position sport. How do you compare a quarterback to a middle linebacker? A center of attack on strong security? The truth is, you can't do that. You can compare by position; who is the best defender, best tight end, etc but this is even limited to the period they play, the total number of games, competitiveness and so on. I'd say he's the best athlete I think he's ever played in the NFL, but that's just a subjective view. (Jerry Rice, San Francisco 49ers) Others certainly disagree. (Image credit: Adam Glanzman/Getty) Sports lovers have seen a giant hole in tv shows in the form of sports. The impact of Coronavirus on TV is so strong that ESPN resorted to the old Wrestlemanias broadcast on Sunday nights. But fans looking for a fix now have a new option. The NFL and NBA are responding to the COVID-19 pandemic - which shuts the NBA as well as other sports in the U.S. - by making their streaming services available for free attractive price. But before you make fun of it, realize that paused sports seasons don't mean you can watch some epic matches. Best streaming services Zoom vs Google Hangouts: Which is right for you? The NFL season ended only in February, but football fans looking for a retro fix can now get the NFL Game Pass for free, trials will end on May 31. We hope things have changed by then, but we can't say anything. Sign up for NFL Game Pass. We wouldn't be surprised if New England Patriots fans re-watched Tom Brady's Super Bowl wins and thought about how good he once was. Personally, I'm more interested in watching the once great Eli Manning stop Brady's two big games. The suspension of the 2019-2020 NBA season was one of the first big signs that the coronavirus would change everything around us, but right now the only social distance that goes back in time was how much space the referees gave LeBron James. The NBA and Turner Sports are partnering to provide a free League Pass for just under a month. Once you sign up for the NBA League Pass, you'll be able to relive old playoff games and runs, as well as the most jaw-dropping games in sports, like the night Reggie Miller burned MSG with threes and dragged Spike Lee against the wall. All these games are available, it is not difficult to see the next move. Try Zoom vs Google Hangouts yourself and bring your other sports fanatics together so you can watch these games at the same time. It's not a Netflix Party, but I wouldn't be surprised if the NFL or NBA finds a way to watch a band. Major League Baseball doesn't open its services, but it does offer free games on YouTube. 7:00 p.m. East tonight (March 31), fans can re-experience Roy Halladay's postseason no-hitter with a recast of 2010 NLD Game 1. MLB has a complete playlist of classic content, titled #MLBAtHome - decisive World Series 2019 Home Run Derby and other opening day games. The National Hockey League, also put on ice, is re-living its paused season at Watch This! From at least 300% return over the next 12 months, according to analysts AcelRx Pharmaceuticals We've made headlines in recent years and for all the wrong reasons. These powerful painkillers are also dangerous addiction - a factor that has led to the opioid epidemic in the U.S. AcelRx is a pharmaceutical company dedicated to creating safer treatments for acute pain, dosing synthetic opioid drugs for sublingual (under the tongue). The company's main product, Sufentanil, was approved by the FDA in 2018 under the name Dsuvia and by the EU as Dzuveo in the same year. A second sublingual Sufentanil system under the name Zalviso has also been approved for use by the EU, and the US also has Phase 3 trials. The company's latest earnings report showed $1.4 million at the top with a product sale of $1.3 million. The sales figure increased by 433% in turn, and the total revenue figure increased by 133% year-on-year. Against this backdrop, several members of Street believe ACRX's $1.40 share price looks like a steal. Kantor analyst Brandon Folkes is optimistic about Dsuvia's prospects as an alternative to existing opioid treatments and believes this potential will boost the company's stock. With the launch of Dsuvia, we believe the investor focus is now shifting to launch measurements and the highest sales potential for the product. As ACRX IV launches a real alternative to opioids, we expect investors to start to appreciate the value of the product. We believe that Dsuvia offers an advance in delivery of adequate pain treatment by eliminating the need for an invasive and time-consuming IV installation in the emergency department, as well as why on a standing, or postoperative, setting. Although hospital launches take time, we expect Dsuvia's acquisition to move revenue beyond Street's current forecasts, which could move shares higher than current levels. Said. In line with his bullish stance, Folkes rates ACRX is a Buy, and its $9 price target means room for a stunning 552% reverse potential over the next 12 months. (Click here to watch Folkes' record) Now turning to the rest of the Street, 3 Purchases and No Holds or Sells have been released in the last three months. Therefore, ACRX has a strong purchasing consensus degree. Based on the average price target of $7, our share may be to fly 407% in the year ahead. (See ACRX stock analysis on TipRanks) NuCana (NCNA) NuCana is a biopharma company focused on new cancer treatments. The company's goal is to provide effective treatments for bile, breast, colorectal, ovarian, and pancreas cancers - while avoiding complications and side effects of existing chemotherapy treatments. NuCana uses a phosphoramidate chemical technology called ProTide to create a class of drugs that overcome the limitations of nucleotide analogues available behind many chemotherapy drugs. NuCana's ProTides has already been used in Gilead antiviral drug in May Sovaldi. In of last year, NuCana Acelarin, has re-announced its Phase III trial of the most remote drug candidate throughout the company as a cure for bile duct cancer. The study covers more than 800 patients in 6 countries and is currently ongoing. In November, the company released data described as 'encouraging' from the Phase Ib study of the same drug. While Acelarin is the flagship drug of the pipeline, NuCana has two hopes in development. NUC-3373 phase I trial as a treatment for solid tumors and colorectal cancers, and NUC-7738 is a second way under investigation for applications to advanced solid tumors. These three are the most advanced colorectal work. Robyn Karnauskas, a 5-star analyst from Truist, sees the pipeline as key to NuCana's investor potential. We believe investors ignore the fact that NCNA is a platform company that we believe is confirmed as defined by the production of clinical products. As we brought 3 products to the clinic including a new drug and two advanced cornerstone chemos. We recommend that the data works on the platform and can produce better chemos [...] While investors focus more on Acelarin, we believe investors should also focus on NUC-3373, another core of our platform-based thesis with data expected in 1H2021. Said. To that end, Karnauskas NCNA puts a $22 price target, suggesting it has room for 384% growth ahead of the stock, along with a Buy rating. (Click here to watch Karnauskas' record) Overall, NCNA's Strong Buy consensus rating is unanimous and based on the last 4 reviews. Warren Buffett, Oracle of Omaha, there are some timeless words of advice. Here are some of his guiding rules for successful investment. Markets finished 2020 on a high note and started 2021 with a bullish trajectory. While all three major indexes have recently soared to an all-time high, investors have ostensibly looked beyond the epidemic and hoped for signs of a rapid recovery. Veteran strategist Edward Yardeni thinks the economic recovery has brought about its own slowdown. With more people getting back to work, as the COVID vaccination program allows for more economic openings, Yardeni predicts a wave of subdued demand, rising wages, and rising prices - in short, a recipe for inflation. Yardeni, in the second half of the year, we may be expecting some consumer price inflation that will not be good for over-valued assets. Said. The warning sign to look at is higher yields in the Treasury bond market. If the Fed softens its low interest rate policy, Yardeni sees the treasury reflect the change first. Such a situation is produced specifically for defensive stock games - and this will naturally bring investors to look at high-efficiency dividend stocks. Opening the TipRanks database, we found three stocks with a hat trick of positive signs: strong buy rating, dividend yields starting at 9% or better - and a recent analyst review pointed to double-digit reverse. CTO Realty Growth (CTO)We will start with CTO Realty Growth, a Florida-based real estate company that made an exciting decision for dividend investors last year: the company announced that it will change the tax status of a real estate investment partnership (REIT) for the tax year ending December 31, 2020. long known high dividend yields, tax code is known for a product that these companies return a high percentage of their profits directly to shareholders. Dividends are the usual way to return. For background, the CTO keeps a diverse portfolio of real estate investments. Holdings include 27 revenue characteristics in 11 states, more than 2.4 million square feet, a total of 18 leasable billboards in Florida. Revenue characteristics are predominantly shopping malls and retail outlets. In its third quarter, the latest report, the CTO sold some 3,300 acres of an developed land for $46,000,000, bought two income properties for $47.9 000,000 and collected ~93% of contracting leases due to. The company also authorized a one-time special distribution in connection with its transition to REIT status; its purpose is to put the company in accordance with the income income regulation in the 2020 tax year. The one-time distribution was made in cash and stock, totaling $11.83 per share. The regular dividend paid in Q3 was 40 cents per common share. For this Q4 $1, a 150% jump was increased; again, this REIT was made to put the company in accordance with the status requirements. At the current dividend rate, the yield is 9.5%, much higher than the average among multi-financial sector peer companies. Analyst Craig Kucera, B. Riley, believes there are plenty of options going forward to expand its portfolio through CTO acquisitions: the CTO hit at the end of its expected disposition guidance high of $33 million in 4Q20, bringing in dispositions of about $85M, tied with exercise of a tenant option to buy a building in the largest temperament aspen CTO, CO. Post estimates cash and restricted cash > $30 Million for these dispositions additional purchases, and we expect the CTO to be active again at 1H21. To this end, buy Kucera rates along with the CTO price target of $67. At current levels, its target of 60% means a one-year reverse potential. (Click here to watch Kucera's record) Overall, CTO Wall Street analysts have 3 assessments on the record, and all agree with the unanimous analyst consensus of a Buy, Strong Buy of this stock. The shares are priced at $41.85 and their average price target of $59.33 suggests room for ~42% growth next year. (See CTO stock analysis on TipRanks) Holly Energy Partners (HEP)The energy sector is known for its high cash flows, but also for its highly paid dividend stocks. Holly Energy Partners is a midstream transportation player in the industry, offering pipeline, terminal and storage services for producers of crude oil and petroleum utilities. Holly bases most of her activities in the Colorado-Utah and New Mexico-Texas-Oklahoma regions. In 2019, which numbers are available in the last full year, the company saw total revenues of $533,000,000. The company's revenues in 2020 fell in the first and second quarters, but recovered to $127.7 million in Q3. Holly reports on distributable cash flow - which dividend is paid - up to $76,900,000 More than $8 million a year. This was supported by a 35 cents per regular share payment or $1.40 per year. At this rate, the dividend yields a strong 10%. Noting the dividend, Well Fargo analyst Michael Blum wrote, our model distribution shows that it is sustainable at this level [loss of revenue] HEP pipeline contracts and Cushing Connect JV project contributions are balanced by inflation escalators. Approximately 80% of HEP's distribution is tax deferred. Blum ALWAYS gives a $20 price target and a One Kilo (i.e. Purchase) rating. Its target is a reverse 38% over the next 12 months. (Click here to watch Blum's record) Our rating primarily reflects the partnership's stable, wage-based cash flows, solid return and conservative balance sheet. he added. For the most part, Wall Street accepts Blum's assessment of HEP, as the STRONG Buy analyst consensus rating shows. This rating is supported by 6 comments, hold split 5-1 against Buys. The average price target, at $18.67, shows that the stock is ~29% room to grow this year. (See TipRanks always stock analysis) DHT Holdings (DHT)Midstreaming is only part of the global oil industry's transportation network. Tankers are another, crude oil, petroleum products moving and liquefied natural gas worldwide, collectively. Bermuda-based DHT operates a fleet of 27 crude oil tankers rated vlcc (very large crude carrier). These vessels are 100% owned by the company and are business horses of the global oil tanker network with a tonnage range between 298K 320K. VLCs. Even through the 'corona half' of 1H20, after four-quarters of see odyssey row income earnings, DHT recorded a seete drop in revenues from 2Q20 to 3Q20. It fell to $142 million from $245 million in the quarter. However, it is also important to point out that the 3Q revenue result increased by 36.5% year-on-year. THE LOSS of EPS, 32 cents, 3Q19 released at 6 cents was a dramatic yoy turnaround. DHT has a history of adjusting its dividend to keep it in line with earnings when needed. The company did this in Q3, and 20 percent of the regular share payment was the first dividend cut in 5 quarters. The overall policy is positive for dividend investors, however, as the company has not answered paying dividends in 43 consecutive quarters - an admirable record. 80 cents per share per year, an impressive 14% yield on the dividend. Kepler analyst Petteer Haugen covers DHT and sees the potential for further returns in the company's contract schedule. Haugen, when 8 of the 16 ships expire their TC contracts by the end of Q1 2021, you can expect freight rates to be valued in H2 2021E. Going into more detail, Haugen adds: The underlying drivers are still robust: fleet growth is low (an average of 1% out of 2020-23E) and the U.S. will still end up becoming an exporter of crude oil by net sea, while U.S. driver tanker issuance is making further export increases. Spot rates we're waiting During 2021E, shortly after oil demand returned to normal. We expect average VLCC rates to be $41,000 in 2022E and $55,000/day in 2023E. In line with his comments, Haugen rates DHT is a Buy. Its $7.40 target price shows that this stock could grow by 34% in the coming months. (Click here to watch Haugen's record) The rest of the street is getting on board. 3 Acquisitions assigned over the last three months and 1 Hold are added to the Strong Buy analyst consensus. In addition, the average price target of $6.13 is ~11% potential reverse. Software stocks as a group performed 36 percent better than the S&P 500, the industry's strongest performance in 20 years -- but there's a downside. Jefferies analyst Brent Thill said valuations in the industry now look stretched, with much potential for multiple expansions among software shares Said. While there is still room for some software names to rise, Thill believes this will depend on key developments. Fortunately for Palantir (PLTR) investors, Palantir is one of the companies Thill thinks it is doing whatever it takes, helping them make an even more high-level path to the industry in 2021. We like the unique nature Offer for high-end data analytic use cases, thill, the company estimates that it will enjoy sales growth rates of at least 30% for the next few years, and boot on these revenues improved after profits. The 5-star analyst characterizes the company's products as the best of its kind and points to interviews with palantir customers who say the company's products are very useful and also very sticky, indicative of high switching costs that will stifle customer confusion and provide pricing power. With a price target of $30 (previously up to $18) and a buy rating pozing, Thill Palantir argues that the stock even deserves a premium valuation over other high-growth precedent stocks. (Click here to watch Thill's record) What does the $30 price target mean for Palantir? Thill says it assumes Palantir can make a gross profit margin of 81% to 82% from sales of $1.4 billion in 2021 and $1.8 billion in 2022. In the bottom line, this non-GAAP (i.e. pro forma) profit of $0.17 per share should run out this year (about twice the company probably earned in 2020) and $0.23 per share next year. However, it is important to emphasize that these are not profits calculated according to generally accepted accounting principles. In fact, most analysts who follow Palantir stock do not expect profitability to appear before 2024 at the latest. Therefore, Thill GAAP does not add P/E folds to a non-E stock. Instead, the analyst values stock futures. As the analyst agreed, the $30 price target assumes that investors will be willing to pay 50 times their 2021 financial income and 39 times their 2022 financial income to own a Palantir stake. This is part of Thill's admission that palantir has only limited revenue visibility into its future, and that the company's revenue streams are subject to lump on quarterly bookings and that the U.S. government is at risk of budget changes. And again, Thill admits that even these valuations represent a premium on what other high-growth software names receive. Thill is the only bull in the painting right now. The 12-month average price target stands at $16.50, 36.5% down from current levels.
